Get with Leticia to resolve any overages. She asked for questions, comments, or changes. There were none.

Angel Guard Presentation – Joe Mader

A presentation was made by Joe Mader, a representative of Guardity Technologies, Inc. The AngelGuard product was originally developed as a result of a project for distracted driving. AngelGuard is a device that simply clicks in the under-dash diagnostic port (OBDII) of any 1996 and newer model vehicle, that immediately calls and transmits critical crash details directly to 9-1-1/local PSAP. The occupants involved in a serious accident can hear the voice of the emergency dispatcher through the device’s integrated speakerphone – even if they cannot respond. It works via an integrated wireless network and has a built in battery backup system, supporting up to 15 minutes of contact with 9-1-1. The representative advised that the device does not call 9-1-1 until the car stops and the data is sent via TTY tones. The device costs less than $400 and does not impose any service charges or fees.

Various questions were asked about the product, especially about testing with the PSAPs, public education efforts, and training of PSAP personnel. The representatives stated the device has not been launched and is currently in its testing phase. The company is also waiting to receive various certifications from the FCC and other agencies. They will also test with the PSAP prior to making the device available to the public. The company is also working on providing training materials for the PSAPs. A suggestion was made to work with NENA/APCO representatives to develop training materials for PSAPs, which was previously done with products offered by emFinders and Ford Sync. A kit was made available to PSAPs which included letters, a FAQ sheet, and a DVD. The representatives thanked the group for allowing them to make the presentation and for the suggestions/recommendations.

Connie is the chair for the Mentoring committee. For newcomers to the group, a letter will be sent out, along with the PETS website and password information.

Cindy thanked the decorating committee for the PET/TNT booth – Leticia, Kari, Claudia, and Mindy. The theme was everyday heroes. The Training and Public Education Professionals of the year award recipients and nominees will be displayed as the everyday heroes. She encouraged members to volunteer at the booth.

CSEC Report (Robert Gonzalez)

Robert stated that due to an incident on a social media (SM) site, CSEC had to implement a policy. All SM interactions were put on hold (bloggers, You Tube, Facebook, Twitter, etc.). The sites will resume accessibility in a couple of months. He encouraged members to subscribe to the Blogger for Cell Phone Sally.

The www.911safety.org store will close in early June. If there are items you need to purchase, please do so immediately. COGs can contact Robert only for the purchase of items. Artwork will be available for continued use even after the store closes.

On February 1, 2013, Robert was promoted to Program Director at CSEC. Melinda Crockom has been selected as the new Public Education Coordinator for CSEC. She was an in-house employee of CSEC whose responsibilities already including 9-1-1 public education efforts, such as the blog post and e-blast.

NENA Pub Ed/Training Committee Update (Sonya Lopez-Clauson)

The NENA NDC conference will be in October 2013, in conjunction with the development committee. If you're interested in joining, please let Sonya know. Sherri Powell is the chair of the NG Training and working group.

Decision Maker Campaign for NG – a powerpoint has been produced and available to help 9-1-1 authorities educate their public officials and citizens about NG 9-1-1 and the importance of funding. A brochure was also created modeling the one developed by North Central Texas COG (NCTCOG). A PSAP checklist is available providing information about the interim texting solution on different options related to texting and if the PSAP want to accept 9-1-1 text messages. A frequent asked questions (FAQ) sheet will also be provided.

Texting to 9-1-1 Awareness Campaign – A meeting was hosted in Arlington at the NCTCOG with representatives from the deaf community and wireless carriers. The FCC and wireless carriers have agreed on a bounce back message. The message will vary slightly from carrier to carrier, but will state that you cannot text message 9-1-1 in this area and the user needs to make a voice or relay call. Some areas do receive text messages, but it may not be implemented with all carriers. Verizon is in use in the NCTCOG area, but not any other carriers. A slogan has been created, “Call if you can, text if you can’t.”

An apps working group is working with the PSAP Operations group on SOPs, public education and training. An information packet has also been put together for app developers.

For Deaf and Hard of Hearing awareness a train the trainer packet is also available.

The Greater Harris County implemented a texting plan in March 2013, focused on primary, target audiences. A brochure tip sheet was also created. You have to register – it's not a 9-1-1 to text site. You can contact Sonya via email, sonya@911.org for more information.

Eric Parry is also starting a training module for those doing the interim texting solution, so please join the working group if you can.

NPEF Conference (Susan Rodriguez)

The National Public Educator Forum (NPEF) group started in 2008. Forms were distributed with information about NPEF on one side and registration to the NPEF conference on the other side. The deadline to register for the conference was extended to May 25, 2013, for PET members only. The NPEF conference will be in Austin, July 21-24, 2013, at the Hilton Garden Inn. Sulduton Alaska, two representatives from Mexico, and 16 states will be represented during this year's conference. Ben Bills will provide a simulator session. Kevin Willett, PSTC will be the keynote speaker and will do a breakout session. Complimentary valet parking is the only parking option available and will only be provided for those staying with the hotel.

9-1-1 Institute Update (Alisa Simmons)

Alisa encouraged everyone to visit the NG 9-1-1 Institute's website, www.ng911institute.org for more information. The NG 9-1-1 Institute, formed in 2003, works in conjunction with the Congressional NG 9-1-1 Caucus. It is the only bi-partisan committee on Capitol Hill dedicated exclusively to emergency communications. It's Bi-canal – both houses of the senate. The Caucus is supported by the NG 9-1-1institute. It's a small organization that has a staff of about 2.5 people.

She encouraged everyone to become a member of the Institute. She discussed some of the accomplishment of the Institute since its inception, including:

- Successful legislation was passed for the NG 9-1-1 Advancement Act of 2012
- The 9-1-1 Honors Awards with several PET members nominated and recognized
- The formation of the Education Coalition and enactment of April as National 9-1-1 Education month. This Coalition is comprised of various organizations (NASNA, NENA, APCO, etc.) The Coalition developed a resource portal, www.know911.org . The website has a variety of downloadable resources for public education to use in any area any time of the year. You have to register on the website. One of the goals is to have a national effort for public education and increase media relations and obtaining air time for messages. A small coalition has been formed to address these various issues and creating/developing a national marketing campaign. Talks are beginning with media outlets such as Good Morning America, Today show, CBS this Morning. The Coalition will meet monthly and April 2014 should show the results of their efforts.
